

IIDCYA Compiling 'European Children's Book'

TEHRAN, Sept. 24—Stories by Iranian children and young adults which were influenced by the literary works and paintings of European children will be translated into English and published in Europe.

According to IRNA, the Institute for Intellectual Development of Children and Young Adults (IIDCYA) has planned to compile stories by 2,500 young Iranian adults for the 'European Children's Book'. Teachers and illustrators will cooperate with Iranian children in compiling the book.

The European Children Festival Literature is currently underway here and will continue until October 8. About 60 authors and illustrators of children's books from five European states are taking part in the event which began on September 22.

Information about the festival is available on www.Xchange.com.

Those interested can visit the website to obtain six pictures of European artists and write stories about them or draw pictures on them and send them back to the Internet workshop.
